St. Philip's Episcopal Church

Brevard, North Carolina

Completed 2005

This project involved the renovation of the worship space in order to expand seating capacity by opening the chapel and the transept to the chancel and choir areas so that they can serve as additional and overflow seating. New arched openings were placed in the existing chancel sidewalls and existing doors were removed allowing good visibility to the chancel and increasing the sense of openness in the space.

The altar table was moved forward and placed on a movable platform and a new screen was designed to provide a dignified and visually strong setting for the altar table, the choir was relocated to a position behind the new screen, the very large pulpit was reduced to a more appropriate size, the interior stone walls were carefully cleaned, and the existing worn pews were replaced by new ones designed to match those that they replaced.
